To render the PICTURE OF EDINBURGH still more worthy of Public patronage, the Publishers have been induced to prepare, at considerable expence, a new Plan of the City and its Environs, on a large Scale, constructed by Mr James Knox, including, not only all the recent improvements, but also those which have been determined on, and are now in progress;—and they flatter themselves, that this Work will be found to contain by far the most accurate detail of the progress and present state of the Capital of Scotland that has hitherto appeared.
