

will serve to shew, how very far behind the rest of Europe, is this nation in improvements, and convenience for travelling. Many of my remarks may appear trite: the character of a people is often rendered conspicuous by minutiae. I have dwelt little upon buildings or pictures: descriptions give but faint ideas; Ciceroni and catalogues are to be had wherever such objects are to be found. I have endeavoured to dip a little into the state of government; to observe, in particular, on the military establishments; to notice the customs and manners of the people; and to remark upon other transient particulars: how far I may have succeeded, I must leave to my more judicious and candid readers to determine.

E R R A T A.

Page 4, line 18, read, I was silent.	Page 57, line 9, read O' Reilly.
8, 4, read, bad fitten down.	58, 9, read O' Reilly.
12, 26, read, the inn being very.	108, 24, after way to it , instead of; put .
22, 9, read, Seguidillas.	109, 12, read, Jacinto.
34, 2, dele, for an instant.	129, 2, after considerably , instead of; put ;
53, 7, read, shall.	131, 27, dele at , before Redinhe.
54, 30, read, walls.	169, 1, dele if.